Introduction

A system has been proposed and developed to store the contents of Institute's Databank as an object of the Digital Library. A structured method has been proposed to organize all the data and a system has been developed which extracts meaningful information from the Data Bank. The proposed Digital Library system architecture, there are several resources that are added to the system. However, they can be divided into two categories, namely physical data sources and digital data sources. Physical data sources are comprised of sources in hard copies available in traditional library and manually catalogued. Digital data sources are comprised of e-books, editorials, published articles, conference proceedings, students' theses or some online blogs etc. First, a standard digital format is devised that describes the type of information (metadata), an institute wants to store about a resource. Metadata fields are selected carefully and then data about the resources is transformed in XML format. Obviously, this process was more challenging for the physical resources compared to digital resources. Digital libraries, or at least their digital collections, unfortunately also have brought their own problems and challenges in areas such as:

- 1. User authentication for access to collections,
- 2. Copyright,
- 3. Digital preservation,
- 4. Equity of access,
- 5. Interface design,
- 6. Interoperability between systems and software,
- 7. Information organization,
- 8. Inefficient or non-existent taxonomy practices (especially with historical material),
- 9. Training and development,
- 10. Quality of metadata,

Exorbitant cost of building/maintaining the terabytes of storage, servers, and redundancies necessary for a functional digital collection. Digital Libraries Trends

Manual libraries are limited by storage space; digital libraries have the potential to store much more information, simply because digital information requires very little physical space to contain it. As such, the cost of maintaining a digital library can be much lower than that of a traditional library. There are a plethora of tools and resources online (many that are free) that can be used to create and enhance a digital learning environment. Listed below are resources and tools 21st century library user can use for digital learning.
