Preface

“Good Governance” the most essential terminology for any society and most important challenge for government to achieve it. It reflects the political, financial and social success of government in a very ethical way. For any government or administrator, it is an effective parameter to judge its efficiency. It can be achieved by drafting transparent policies & their effective implementation, equal participation & contribution of common people and government both for the welfare for society.

Good governance is a very broad term which has already been defined by many socialist & political leaders. Everyone has their own views. Here, we are presenting this edited book named “Good Governance” which is a collective effort of researchers / faculty members of all over India by submitting their views on Good Governance.

In first chapter, Mr. Ajit, Rajasthan has elaborated the meaning of good governance and discussed its features, objectives & its requirement in present scenario.

In second, forth, sixth & eighth chapter, authors has discussed the origin and significance of Good governance in Indian Perspective and the challenges faced by Indian Government to achieve it.

In third chapter, Dr. Pappi Misra has discussed the international principals of good governance and importance of Right to Information act in establishing good governance.

In fifth chapter, authors correlate the role of insolvency and bankruptcy code, 2016 in improving governance in India’s Business Ranking.

In seventh chapter, Dr. Anu from Lucknow has studied the status of governance in India and thoroughly defined it by Good Governance Index (GGI) in different sectors i.e. Agricultural & Allied, Commerce & Industries, Human Resource Development, Judicial & Public Sector etc.

In ninth chapter, Mr. Kuldeep Singh has mainly focused on Good Governance and employment Generation through MGNREGA. This article explains the system of participatory democracy through economic and political decentralization and by giving major roles to the Panchayati Raj Institutions.

The tenth chapter is an attempt of Dr. Udaybhan Singh to discuss the needs and challenges of Good Governance in present day scenario.

Next chapter discusses the political psychology of groups and the role & importance of groups in politics and administration.

The twelfth chapter is the reflection about the Rural Good Governance Program called Back to Village. The author tried to elaborate the objectives and features of Back to Village program and how it is helpful in improving the socio-economic progress of villages.

The very last chapter of this book explores the issue of casteism and Women empowerment in the ideology of Guru Nanak Dev and Its significance in present context.

I am really thankful to all the authors for their precious contribution.

I pay my special gratitude to Almighty God, to my family, friends & office bearers for their great assistance and support.

Thank you once again.
